Q: How does my child qualify for a grant?

A: A qualified grant application includes a completed (all pages) application with signatures from both a parent/guardian and the child's therapy provider(s) submitted by the due date.

Q: How much money is given for each grant?

A: The amount varies with the nature of the request, with the average grant at $700. The maximum amount currently available per grant cycle is $1,200 per child.

Q: Will Elevations pay my outstanding balance to my child's therapy provider?

A: No. Funds from Elevations may be applied to your child's therapy services from the grant award date forward.

Application Questions:

Q: Is my child's therapist required to sign off on the application? (page 5)

A: YES. We want to ensure your child's therapist agrees with your request and/or you agree with their recommendations. You and your child's therapist(s) are a team in providing your child the best care and Elevations supports your team.

Q: What if I don't know the names of my child's therapist(s)? (page 2)

A: Please provide as much information as possible. We ask for therapist names in the event we need to contact them for additional information about your request.

Q: How do I know how much to ask for? (page 2)

A: Ask for the amount your child needs to fully benefit from their therapy services, whether that is help with 5 visits or 150 visits, or help with copays or your deductible. If you are requesting equipment, please provide the cost including shipping. Past requests have ranged from $20 for a therapy ball to thousands of dollars for multiple therapy services. Please talk with your child's therapist to work out the details of your request.

Q: What are some examples of the "other funding opportunities" on page 2?

A: Some families have received financial assistance from other nonprofits, such as the ISAAC Foundation, or other resources, such as the Developmental Disabilities Administration (DDA) or Infant Toddler Network (children age 0-3).

Q: Why do you want my child's "story"? (page 3)

A: This is our best way to get to know your child and understand your family's situation. It doesn't have to be long, just tell us what your child needs and why, and how we can help.

Q: Why do you want to know if my child has tried a piece of equipment or a specific program in therapy? (page 3)

A: Elevations supports a family's opportunity to continue or supplement their child's therapy at home with therapist-recommended equipment. We need to know if your child has tried the equipment or program with a therapist, if that trial period was successful and beneficial for your child, and if the therapist will continue to support and guide you once the equipment or program is purchased. If a child has not tried equipment or a program, or if the therapist will not be involved in the use of the equipment or program, we will not fund the request.

Q: Why do you need insurance, deductible, and copay information? (page 4)

A: This information gives us an idea of what is available to your child and your out of pocket amounts. Each insurance company is different regarding therapy coverage, number of visits, copay per visit, and the annual deductible.

Q: If my child's therapist recommends another provider's services, how do I complete the application?

A: First schedule an appointment with the recommended service provider, then complete the application. You and your child's therapist need to provide the contact information for the recommended service. (Example: OT recommends behavioral therapy services. Parent schedules the child for a behavioral therapy appointment. Parent and OT complete the Elevations application and check to see if the behavior therapist has a provider agreement in place with Elevations.)

Q: Two of my children are in therapy services. Do I need to complete applications for both of them?

A: YES. The only exception to this rule is if more than one child is applying for a piece of equipment they will share. In this instance, you and your children's therapist(s) will need to clearly indicate how the request will serve more than one child.

Q: Will you accept late applications?

A: NO. Elevations receives over 70 applications each grant cycle. If your application is submitted complete but after the due date, it will be included in the next grant cycle.

Q: Why doesn't Elevations ask for financial information or tax returns?

A: Elevations firmly believes that regardless of financial situation, sometimes a family needs help. We want children to receive the therapy services or equipment they need.
